

Social Justice in Public Health Seminar Series 2016:

Sentencing Laws & Low Income Communities

Speaker: Ignacio Hernandez, JD

Thursday, October 27

4:00 – 6:00 PM, Lander Hall, Lecture Hall B

Ignacio Hernandez, JD

Arguably the United States operates two distinct criminal justice systems: one for wealthy people and another for poor people and minorities. The former is a vigorous system with constitutional protections for defendants. Yet the experiences of poor and minority defendants within the criminal justice system often differ substantially from that model.

Attorney Ignacio Hernandez discusses the impact of this inequity on sentencing and low income communities.

Upcoming: 11/10 Housing Instability & Homelessness

For more information, publichealth@tu.edu, 707-638-5838.

TUC Public Health Program <http://cehs.tu.edu/publichealth/>

1310 Club Drive, Mare Island, Vallejo, CA 94592